RE; Geographic Integration of Hepatitis C Virus; A global threat

Dear Dr Ji,

May ,19,2016

May I take this opportunity and thank you and your respected reviewers for their valuable comments regarding our review article. Indeed such comments are important and definitely they will improve the quality of our paper. The paper has been reviewed and thoroughly corrected and edited by professional a native English speaking person. The font style and size (especially in the references section) has been edited and written according the guide lines of World Journal of Virology as you suggested.

Reviewer #1A very well-conceived, lucid, informative minireview that is to be shared with the scientific community. The readers will gain valuable insight into the evolution of the Hepatitic C Virus at the global scale. The term 'inter continental' should be changed as 'intra continental' in Figure 2. Transcontinental is OK

WE would like to thank this reviewer for highlighting the quality of our review and indeed we believe it will have great impact on the readers and the Journal and we have changed the terms as he suggested

Reviewer #2 we would like the reviewer for his valuable comments and The manuscript has been revised revised regarding grammatical and spelling issues. The data analysis and the references have been corrected and highlight and all the methods are clarified in the methods section as suggested.

Reviewer #3 An informative and useful mini-review, we would like to thank this reviewer for his encouragement and we have changed Fig. 2 and text the term “intercontinental” to “intra-continental” and language expert, has corrected all grammatical and spelling issues.

Reviewer #4 we would like to thank the reviewer for uprising the quality of or review and describing it as “ interesting compilation of information from several research articles and review in HCV epidemiology. “ and indeed we have edited and corrected all the linguistic short cuts and the needed comments .

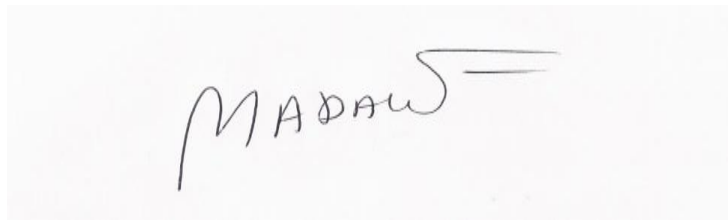

By this we fulfilled all the needed requirements and comments raised by reviewers

I hope we can see this paper published soon in your respected journal

Should you have any further comments or questions, please feel happy to let me know

Do accept my best regards

Mohamed
