Rare case of sclerosing mesenteritis and low grade follicular lymphoma

Seema Shah, Gillian Mahy, Enrico Roche

1 Abstract

Sclerosing mesenteritis is a rare condition involving small and large bowel mesentery. The diagnosis of sclerosing mesenteritis requires appropriate clinical and radiological analysis with computerised tomography (CT) and magnetic resonance imaging. Biopsy is necessary for definitive diagnosis. We report an unusual case of long standing sclerosing mesenteritis that subsequently progressed to a follicular Hodgkin's Lymphoma. Our patient initially presented with persistent abdominal pain and was diagnosed with
