English language Editing

The manuscript, meticulously reviewed for typos and grammar/syntax, is a testament to the author's extensive experience and academic prowess. As an associate professor at the University of Cincinnati for 14 years and a principal investigator on numerous NIH grants, the author's credentials are impeccable. His PhD from the University of Strathclyde (Glasgow) and his tenure as a visiting scientist there further underscore his academic excellence. With 11 books edited for top publishers like Springer Nature, and over 335 publications spanning research papers, narrative and systematic reviews, book chapters, and abstracts, his contribution to the field is unparalleled. He also serves on the editorial boards of esteemed journals, including WJSC.

Also, he has recently submitted multiple Editorials in WJSC, 4 of which have been accepted and 2 in review, waiting for favorable decisions:

While we have taken extensive measures, including revision and consultation with the English language department at Sulaiman AlRajhi University, we are open to further suggestions. We appreciate your understanding and value your input in this process.
