

Our study focuses on the Global Burden of Disease (GBD) database, which is a secondary data analysis and not a clinical research study. Therefore, we did not conduct any direct participant recruitment or collect individual data.

As this research involves publicly available data from the GBD database and does not include personal identifying information, the requirement for Institutional Review Board (IRB) approval is not applicable.